

Activating Captions on Your Television:

If you have an analog television:

1. To turn the captions on, find the CC button or caption menu on your television remote control.
2. Following the menu, choose CC1 for English captions.
3. To open the closed captions, a click of the CC button on the remote control is all it takes for most modern television sets.

If you have a HDTV set:

With new HDTV sets, turning on captions can sometimes be a bit more difficult. This is because when you are watching HDTV, you must rely on the closed captions on your cable box, not your TV.

Where the use of a Menu is required, there is usually a button on the remote control that reads "Menu."

1. Press the MENU button.
2. Various choices will appear, such as a choices of language, setting the clock, auto-programming the TV, choosing channels and so on. Look for the selection that includes several options for captions, such as having them run with the sound on or eliminating the sound, but keeping the captions.
3. Enable the captions using the CC1 setting.

If you have a Motorola set-top box:

1. You need to first power off the cable box while keeping the television on.
2. Then hit MENU on the remote control. This will bring up a long list.
3. Press the down arrow to get to the Closed Captioning line. Press the right arrow button to switch the closed captioning from "Disabled" to "Enabled."
4. Other options appear when you enable the CC, but you probably don't need to worry about those. Just make sure the settings are on CC1.
5. Press MENU again. Turn the cable box back on and you should have visible captions.
